The women of this city who make most of their clothes, realize the advantage of choosing their dress materials early. They have learned from past experience that early choosing is also best choosing.

When you buy your dress pattern early, you get it fresh off the bolt while there is still all the newness and freshness to it you could possibly desire.

You can also make your dress leisurely and have it ready to put on the very first time the chilly winds of Fall make warmer garments necessary and comfortable.

In the matter of cost, the same moderate prices rule now as they will during the entire season.

We must call your attention to our superior showing of Silks and Trimmings.

"FOURTH OF JULY" IN MEXICO

City of Mexico, Sept. 16.—War-ridden as is this republic there was no appreciable diminution in the crowd that assembled in the Zocalo last night tohear Provisional President Victoriano Huerta cry "Viva Mexico" and ring the liberty bell. The ceremony, known as the "Grito of Hidalgo," ushers in the annual celebration of the Mexican independence day.

It was on September 15, 1810, that the patriot priest, Padre Hidalgo, began the revolution which resulted in the overthrow of the Spanish power in Mexico. During the preceding year the revolutionary spirit was rife throughout the country. Many attempts to perfect an organization that might contend with the Spanish power were made, but they uniformly ended by the execution of all the leaders in the plots.

Hidalgo was one of the leaders of an undiscovered plan and it was intended, as in other cases, to perfect organization before striking the first blow. Word came to Hidalgo that the plot had been discovered and the troops were even then on the way to arrest him.

Then it was, so the story goes, that Hidalgo rang the bell of his little church in the town of Dolores and summoned the band of patriots about him. A mass was said and he announced that the time had come for action. About 300 men, poorly armed and with virtually no equipment of war, responded, and the march on the city of Guanajuato was commenced. As the motley band of insurgents passed the church at Atotonilco Hidalgo took the banner illustrating the appearance of the Holy Virgin at Guadalupe and raised it as the battle flag of the war of independence.

But while Hidalgo and his compatriots were fearless, they were not soldiers nor skilled in the art of war. After achieving wonderful success and with a constantly increasing army he had reached almost in sight of the City of Mexico, when the tide turned. His army was dispersed and he fled northward toward Chihuahua, where he and his chief lieutenants were captured. They were promptly executed and their heads placed on spikes at the four corners of the prison as a warning to other revolutionists. Other leaders arose, and Mexico continued in a state of upheaval and unrest for seventy years, until the soldier and statesman, Porfirio Diaz, was elected to the presidency.

Thus, briefly sketched, was the beginning of Mexican independence, and this is the reason that September 16 is celebrated throughout the Republic of Mexico.

The beginning of the annual celebration last night was marked with all of the customary enthusiasm. In the great square where their forefathers lifted their eyes to the top of the teocalli to see the throbbing heart that the priest cleft from the bosom of a fair prisoner, the peones, jammed a hundred thousand strong, gazed on the clanging bell that Hidalgo used 103 years ago. The poorer classes occupied all the central part of the square. Directly in front of the National Palace, the Municipal Palace and the Cathedral, the three great piles which bound three sides of the Zocalo, chairs were placed for the better classes. The numerous windows and balconies of the edifices mentioned were reserved for invited guests.

From dark the crowd was entertained with fireworks, while half a dozen picked military bands, playing alternately, never allowed the music to cease for more than an instant. Five minutes before the hands on the great clock over the Palace indicated the hour of 11 the bands stopped. There was a hush that only emphasized the burst of applause that greeted Gen. Huerta when he appeared on the brilliantly lighted central balcony of the palace. As he took hold of the gilded cord that reached up to the historic bell, the crowd again was stilled. With the first clang of the hour the time-honored "grito" was delivered by the executive. Then the massed bands burst into the national hymn, accompanied by a chorus of a thousand voices. For nearly an hour the Provisional President was cheered. In the excitement of the occasion there were many "mueras" for the "Americanos" and many "vivas" for Don Victoriano.

Today the celebration of the national independence day was continued with unabated enthusiasm. The decorations of business houses and residences were on a more elaborate scale than ever before. The grand civic and military parade this afternoon numbered thousands of marchers. It was several hours in passing the stand, whence it was reviewed by Gen. Huerta, the officers of the cabinet, members of the senate and chamber of deputies, high officers of the army and many prominent citizens.

BIDS FOR STATE BONDS REJECTED

Oklahoma City, Ok., Sept. 15.—Two bids were received by the State Funding Board for the $3,000,000 bond issue, and both were rejected. One was from I. H. Nakdimen, a banker of Sallisaw, who offered par and accrued interest, but on a six months' optional basis, agreeing in the meantime that if the holders of warrants desired to transfer them for bonds, it would be satisfactory to him as a bidder. The other bid was by the State Exchange Bank of Oklahoma City, also offering par and accrued interest and to take $200,000 worth of the bonds when ready for delivery and similar amounts on or before expiration of each thirty days following until the entire issue is taken up. The bid was conditioned that the bond issue first be approved by the Supreme court of the state, and that it also be approved by the bidder's attorney.

The board, in rejecting the bids, directed that they be issued as of Oct. 1, when the 6 per cent interest rates on the warrants will cease and the 41-2 per cent bond interest rate will begin. The state will offer the holders of warrants bonds in lieu of them, the interest being payable semi-annually. The full bond issue is to cover approximately $2,500,000 in state warrants which have accumulated since statehood and which the state is unable to pay, and the remainder is for interest accrued on the warrants.

SECOND ARREST FOR N. Y. MURDER

New York, Sept. 15.—Announcement was made late tonight by Police Inspector Faurot that another man was under arrest here in connection with the murder of Anna Aumuller, the crime with which Hans Schmidt, the priest, is charged.

Faurot declared the new developments would prove fully as sensational as Schmidt's arrest.

The inspector, as he left headquarters with Detectives O'Gill and O'Connor, said they were going to upper Manhattan, where they had under arrest, in his own home, a prominent physician.

The inspector later arested Dr. E. Muret, a dentist, of 301 St. Nicholas avenue. The doctor was taken at his home, which was left in charge of detectives.

No. 301 St. Nicholas avenue is in the vicinity of 125th street and near St. Joseph's Church, where Father Schmidt was arrested.

Dr. Muret is about 30 years old.

LAND PAYMENTS AGAIN DEFERRED

Washington, Sept. 16.—Indian Commissioner Sells today announced the extension for one year of the deferred payments due between Nov. 1, 1913 and March 1, 1914, on lands of the Choctaw, Chickasaw, Seminole and Creek Nations sold to settlers during the years 1910, 1911 and 1912.

This order is made on account of the drouth in Oklahoma making it impossible for purchasers to make their next annual payment without great hardship. While largely helpful to the purchasers, it is in no way harmful to the best interest of the Indians since the security is ample, the indebtedness interest bearing and there is now more money to their credit than can be distributed among the tribes under existing law before the extended payments become due.

Retired but Still Busy.

St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 16.—James J. Hill, the last of the comparatively few men in America who are credited with having earned the title of railroad kings, celebrated his seventyfifth birthday anniversary today. Mr. Hill was born in Guelph, Ont., Sept. 16, 1838. A year ago last July he announced his retirement, having completed thirty-three years of active railroading in the Northwest. He had concluded to take a rest, he said, and in a valedictory he reviewed the growth and progress of the Great Northern system and declared the time had arrived to place the command of the road's forces in younger hands.

After announcing his retirement Mr. Hill went on his annual fishing trip to the St. John river. This summer he has again been catching salmon in Canada. But the year that elapsed between these fishing trips was not one of vacation and relaxation. Mr. Hill's activities during the twelve months or more that have passed since his retirement have been varied enough to tax the energies of a man of half his years.

Last summer Mr. Hill bought two banks in St. Paul, merged them, and also acquired control of the Northwestern Trust Co. He is no longer chairman of the board of directors of the Great Northern, it is true, but it may be said that he still keeps in closest touch with every detail of the workings of that system. Not a cent is spent but he knows the reason for the outlay. Not an earnings statement but is scanned and analyzed by the master mind.

Seventy-five years young, Mr. Hill may not be chairman of directors, but he is chairman of the Great Northern system none the less.

THAW CASE WELL BE HEARD TODAY

Colebrook, N. H., Sept. 15.—The judicial branch of the United States government assumed joint guardianship of Harry K. Thaw Monday. By virtue of habeas corpus issued at Concord Saturday, United States Marshal E. P. Nute became one of the Matteawan fugitive's custodians and tomorrow morning Thaw will be taken to Littleton, N. H., and produced before Judge Edgar Aldrich in the United States district court. The writ was obtained by Thaw's lawyers as a weapon against Wm. Travers Jerome in case Jerome should essay forcibly to get Thaw across the New York border. Before the federal court tomorrow, they will seek to have the writ continued to safeguard their client, should Governor Felker find against Thaw in the extradition hearing to be held at Concord, probably on Wednesday.

Jerome will oppose the continuance of the writ and will insist on an immediate hearing, even though there is a possibility that Thaw may be released from custody. Jerome believes Thaw's counsel would make no attempt to get their client out of the state under the circumstances and that Thaw could immediaely be arrested and brought before the governor as arranged.

To Stop Scaling of Psoriasis

This Troublesome Skin Disease Promptly Checked by a very Simple Attention.

Classed with eczema, psoriasis has been considered one of the most obstinate of skin diseases.

A lady in Lexington, Ky., says that before she began using S. S. S. the disease broke out at frequent intervals where she thought it cured. But by getting her blood under control by the influence of S. S. S., psoriasis entirely disappeared and there was never again the slightest sign of it.

Like nearly all skin diseases, psoriasis is primarily due to impaired blood.

The skin is but a network of fine blood vessels. And it is a perfectly natural consequence that any influence in the blood that is a condition of ill health makes its first appearance in the skin. There is one ingredient in S. S. S. which peculiarly stimulates cellular or glandular activity to select from the blood or from this fine network of blood vessels in the skin, those elements which it requires for regeneration.

Thus pimples, acne, eczema, lupus, or any other blood condition that attacks the skin or seeks an outlet through the skin, is met with the antidotal effect of S. S. S.

This is why skin troubles vanish so readily and why they do not return.

You can get S. S. S. in any drug store, but insist upon having it. Take no chance by permitting anyone to recommend a substitute. And if your blood condition is such that you would like to consult a specialist freely, address the Medical Dept., The Swift Specific Company, 182 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

BURNETT TRIAL GOES OVER FOR TERM

Sapulpa, Okla., Sept. 15.—The second trial of the Burnett brothers, exbankers of Sapulpa, was started today before Special Judge Frank Matthews of Altus, sitting in the district court in place of Judge Wade Stanfield, who had voluntarily retired. Before the jury was empanelled, Attorney General Charles West requested that the jury be discharged and a new venire drawn, but this motion was overruled and the selection of a jury proceeded with until the twelve men were selected just before noon.

When court convened at 1:30 the court stenographer was absent and Judge Matthews issued a bench warrant for the young man and the papers were given to Sheriff King. The offender was brought before the judge, who fined him $5 and costs for contempt of court in not being present when the hour for court procedure had arrived.

Just before the jury was called in Attorney General West again asked for a dismissal of the jury and upon consideration, Judge Mathews so ruled and upon joint agreement of all attorneys the cases were set over until the January term.

From W. H. Horton.

Indianola, Miss., Sept. 10, 1913.

Mr. Norrell, Editor Evening News, Ada, Okla.

Dear Sir and Friend: I regret so much not having a chance to shake hands with and say good bye to all my good Ada friends I thought I would ask you through the columns of the News to give them all a hearty hand shake, saying good bye and wishing them all God speed. For many reasons I regretted leaving Ada. I appreciate the good friends I have made over there and shall think of them all often.

We made our trip to Memphis all O. K., spent two days in the city with my sister. We then went 13 miles out to an aunt's where we found big dishes of fried chicken, good fruit, plenty of fresh vegetables and more good sweet milk than my whole crowd could drink.

I left my children and Mrs. Williams out at the above aunt's and came to Indianola via Leland where I had an hour to shake hands with a bunch of friends and get my mail. Am spending two days here with my father and family using a good part of the time eating good things and sleeping. Am drinking rather heavy but its good rich sweet milk and I'm enjoying it to the fullest and have gained two pounds in weight and am feeling a great deal better.

Crops are very fine here and there seems to be a general good feeling among the merchants and farmers.

I saw one farmer sell a bale of cotton today weighing 545 pounds, bringing $87.20, the seed brought $15.05 making $102.25. This is of course a better grade cotton than we raise in Pontotoc county. I expect to go back to my home and work at Leland tomorrow. Will get my children down from Memphis in a few days and will go back in our cottage home where I hope to be able to keep my family together. I hope to be remembered in the prayers of the good people and with my very best wishes to one and all,

Very truly your friends,
W. H. HORTON.

DURANT'S NEW FOOTBALL TEAM

Coach Laird of the Southeastern State Normal football team, states that he is highly pleased with the outlook for the coming season. On Thursday the squad was out on the practice field, and he states that the men looked good. The new men are big, strong fellows, and will aid materially the men reserved from last year's team. The first practice work was all that could be desired, and the men are enthused with the idea of going through the season without a single defeat and are already planning for the championship pennant.

Coach Laird and Manager Dodson have made a deal with the fair directors, and the game with Tahlequah will be played at the fair grounds on the second day of the fair. This will be educational day, and students from all Southeastern Oklahoma will be invited to attend the game. Tahlequah has sent word that they will bring a large delegation from that place, and a number of other towns will be invited.

The season tickets have been subscribed for liberally by our citizens who recognize the value of the team to the city and to the Southeastern. The season tickets, good for five games, are selling for $2.00, and every one should procure one.—Durant Democrat.

Roads the Best Investment.

"History does not tell of a better investment than you four hundred thousand people of British Columbia have made by spending 16 million dollars in three years on the roads of your province," said Judge J. T. Ronald of Seattle in a recent address to the Progress Club.

Judge Ronald quoted figures to prove his contention that good roads were essential to a country's prosperity and he quoted more figures to show that bad roads caused a tremendous annual loss.

"If I had all the money lost in the United States each year for ten years because of bad roads," said the judge, "I could pay off the interest on the national debt, build a Panama Canal, build three magnificent roads east and west across the continent, do much good work and still have 100 million dollars left."

Someone laughed in doubt, but the judge followed up his statement with figures and he easily demonstrated his argument.

The average cost a ton for hauling farm produce an average distance of nine miles to market or to a railway depot over poor roads in the United States is $2.07. This is computed from figures collected over a period of ten years. That figures out at 23 cents a ton mile.

On good roads over the same distance the cost is eight cents a ton a mile. The loss on bad roads says the judge, is $1.35 a ton for every ton hauled in the last ten years over the bad roads.

The tonnage hauled to depots and to markets and the tonnage hauled back from markets and depots to farms approximate 300 million tons in the ten year period. Losing $1.35 a ton over bad roads, the judge figures that the total loss in the ten year period has been 405 million dollars, a tariff to muddy roads, as he phrases it.—Vancouver World.

W. O. W. UNVEILING SUNDAY, SEPT. 28

At the meeting of the W. O. W. camp Monday evening it was decided that to avoid conflict with the Baptist revival, it would be best to postpone the unveiling of the several monuments to deceased Woodmen in Rosedale cemetery until Sunday, September 28. At this time it is expected that a large attendance will be had both of Woodmen and others. The uniform rank will have an important part in the ceremonies and an invitation will be extended to Head Consul W. B. Shrunk to be present and deliver an address.

Through the work of the hustling deputies J. N. and A. B. Morgan and aid of some of the members, fifty new members have been added to the Ada camp during the past three weeks and it looks as if their ambition to add 100 to the rolls will be realized.

J. Q. Adams, who returned from Muskogee and Stigler today, says that section has been drenched with rain. So much so, in fact, that cotton is sprouting in the bolls. Some hail damage was also done.

Awaiting The Joyful Sound

The Wonderful Music that Bursts Forth When the Stork Arrives.

That funny, little, brassy cry that echoes the arrival of the new baby is perhaps the most cherished remembrance of our lives. And thousands of happy mothers owe their preservation to health and strength to Mother's Friend. This is an external remedy that is applied to the abdominal muscles. It relieves all the tension, prevents tenderness and pain, enables the muscles to expand gently, and, when baby comes, the muscles relax naturally, the form is preserved without laceration or other accident.

You will find Mother's Friend on sale at almost any drug store, as it is one of the standard, reliable remedies that grandmothers everywhere have relied upon.

With its daily use during the period of expectation, there is no weakness, no nausea, no morning sickness, no pain, distress or strain of any kind. Its influence is truly remarkable, as it penetrates the tissues and renders them pliant and easily governed by the demands of nature. You will be surprised at its wonderful effect and what a grateful relief it affords.

Especially to young women Mother's Friend is one of the greatest of all helpful influences.

You will find this wonderful remedy on sale at the store where you trade, or they will get it for you. It is prepared by Bradfield Regulator Co., 136 Lamar Building, Atlanta, Ga. Write them for a very valuable book to expectant mothers.

CONSERVE MOISTURE BY FREQUENT SHALLOW CULTIVATION

Over the entire State of Oklahoma the ground is saturated deep down into the subsoil, and now that fair, warm weather is at hand, every farmer is anticipating a bountiful crop this year.

We have plenty of moisture now but we have not any assurance that we are going to continue to have it all during the year. The way to give crops moisture during dry periods is to store up this moisture in the ground during the wet periods. It can then be used by the plants during the periods of no rainfall.

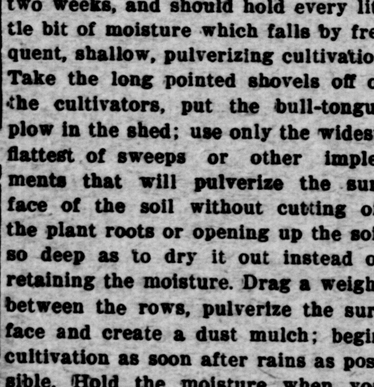

If there is one thing that we would like to impress upon every farmer and truck grower in Oklahoma at this time, it is to put the lid on the moisture supply while we have it. We have just one way to do this and that is by cultivating the surface of the soil to prevent evaporation.

A blanket o floose dirt on the surface helps to prevent the escape of moisture which may be in the subsoil and which, in the form of vapor escapes continually unless prevented by a loose surface through which the vapor will not pass readily.

Every farmer should take a lesson from the dry, hot weather of the past two weeks, and should hold every little bit of moisture which falls by frequent, shallow, pulverizing cultivation Take the long pointed shovels off of the cultivators, put the bull-tongue plow in the shed; use only the widest, flattest of sweeps or other implements that will pulverize the surface of the soil without cutting off the plant roots or opening up the soil so deep as to dry it out instead of retaining the moisture. Drag a weight between the rows, pulverize the surface and create a dust mulch; begin cultivation as soon after rains as possible. Hold the moisture when you get it, because you will surely get some moisture and almost certainly sufficient to mature drouth-resistant crops if cultivation is properly done.

The principal thing to keep in mind is to pulverize the surface and DO IT NOW. Where crops are already planted, surface cultivations should begin as soon as the top soil begins to dry. Never allow a crust to form over any of the land you are cultivating.—Oklahoma State Board of Agriculture, Demonstration Farm Department, by D. S. Woodson, Superintendent.

L. S. CHILCUTT REPORTS CONDITIONS AROUND FITZHUGH

L. S. Chilcutt of Stevens-Wilson Co. returned from his farm at Fitzhugh Wednesday morning and makes the following report on conditions around that section:

Wheat will average 20 bushels per acre and about 12,000 bushels are being shipped out, with plenty left for seed.

Oats will average 50 bushels and about 30,000 bushels are being shipped, with great quantities being stored for feed and sale later.

About five cars of Irish potatoes are almost ready for the market.

Cotton prospects are excellent, but corn needs rain for a bumper crop, although will make fair yield without. Hay crop is pretty fair and preparing to cut. Quantities of forage crops, such as cane, kafir corn and millet, are doing nicely and the community is sure to have worlds of feed for the winter.

With prospects so flourishing, the bank as well as all the other business concerns of Fitzhugh will be in extra good shape.

The new hardware store in Fitzhugh is doing nicely, with prospects for building up a splendid business.

FRISCO ANNOUNCES TWO-CENT RATE

The delay in the rearrangement of passenger tariff schedules was caused by the change of management since the road went into the hands of a receiver.

GARDEN SAGE DARKENS GRAY HAIR SO NATURALLY NOBODY CAN TELL

Restores Its Lustre, Prevents Scalp Itching; Dandruff and Falling Hair.

That beautiful, even shade of dark, glossy hair can only be had by brewing a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur. While it is a mussy, tedious task it well repays those whose hair is turning gray, faded and streaked.

Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray and looks dry, wispy and scraggly just an application or two of Sage and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundred fold.

Don't bother to prepare the tonic; you can get from any drug store a 50 cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," ready to use. This can always be depended upon to bring back the natural color and lustre of your hair and is the best thing known to remove dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair.

Everybody chooses "Wyeth's" Sage and Sulphur because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush and draw this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time which requires but a few moments. Do this at night and by morning the gray hair has disappeared and after another application it becomes beautifully dark and appears glossy, lustrous and abundant. It certainly helps folks look years younger and twice as attractive, says a wellknown down town druggist. Gwin & Mays Drug Co. Ada, Okla. adv.

Dry Weather and Shade Trees.

Complaints have been made during the past few weeks of the dying of shade trees.

The top of the tree, or the present season's growth, begins to appear dry and dead. Soon all the leaves are dead and fall off. Trees in this condition are dying for the lack of moisture and nothing can be done for them after it is noticed. The remedy is prevention. If one intends to keep shade trees in a healthy, growing condition in Oklahoma towns it is necessary to give them special attention and sometimes even to water them. When one has some nice trees he is especially anxious to keep it will pay to give special care to the trees and to have them ready to withstand the severest test possible should it come.

The first and most important reqquirement is cultivation. The soil should be kept free from vegetation for at least five or six feet on all sides of the tree. This circle should be spaded up in the spring and worked down to a dust mulch which should be maintained during the entire season by frequent cultivation.

If one desires to water, the soil can be cultivated so as to form a sort of basin around the tree. The water can be run into this and can thus reach the roots. When watering any sort of plants it should be remembered that a thorough soaking once a week is much better than simply moistening the top one-half inch or one inch of soil every day. As soon after watering as possible the soil should be cultivated and the dust mulch secured so as to prevent evaporation.

If one desires to go to a little more expense he can place about four four-inch drain tile around the tree. These tiles should be placed on end about three or four feet from the tree, the lower end slanting slightly toward the tree. The tile may be placed in the ground from fifteen to twenty-four inches. Once a week or oftener one may let the water run into the tile until full and a good watering of the roots will be secured.—Leonard G. Herron, Department of Horticulture and Botany, Oklahoma A. and M. College, Stillwater.

Bill Mercer's Idea of a Knocker

The knocker is about as sorry and mean as any animal we know of. He is known to every community. He is also a pessimist of the worst sort. If the republicans elect a president the people will be ground down by the rich; if a democrat is elected they will tear the tariff to pieces and everybody will have to work for six bits a day. If the socialists are successful, we will all work for nothing, and if the prohibitionists get in power, Milwaukee would be wiped off the map, and the knocker might have to do a real day's work.

If any improvements are to be made in his town he gets up, paws the air, cusses about the high taxes, and never pays a cent. He throws cold water on every proposition if he can. He is jealous if another man comes along and makes a dollar, and when he finally does die or some one kills him, all good citizens breathe a sigh of relief and fervently return thanks for his passage from the town and the earth, and even the dogs way their tails for joy.

Shooting the Candle.

In the October Woman's Home Companion appears a department called "Entertainment" in which various subscribers give suggestions as to the best ways to entertain guests. One contributor writes as follows:

"During a mountain camping trip we were invited to a Candle Shooting. When we arrived we found our neighboring campers assembled around a camp fire, and at a distance of about a hundred feet we saw a tiny light.

"Our host handed one of the number a small rifle saying as he did so, 'This is to be target shooting with a candle for the "bull's-eye." The object is to see who can put the candle out by shooting at it.'

"Each took a turn, but only one succeeded in accomplishing the feat, and this was a young lady who had handled a gun but once before."

A. N. Davis of Steedman states that his community had considerably more rain than fell around Ada. Everything has been thoroughly soaked there.

The country paper, for the most part, goes to a class of people whose reading is largely limited—the farmer folk—people who haven't an easy access to the big dailies and the hundreds of magazines. Its weekly visit is a heralded event in the family life, and there is a scramble each time for a turn at reading its interesting pages It is loaned to a neighbor with the strict injunction to "be sure and take good care of it." It is read and reread from headline to the last patent medicine reader at the bottom of the last column on the last page.

Almost without exception the local merchant who is enjoying the biggest business is the one who uses most persistently and consistently the space of the local newspaper. It stands without argument, that the man who gets the people's patronage is the man who carries what the people want and lets them know he has it. And what more efficient way is there for the merchants of the Southwest, the country merchants, to reach the people of their community than through the local papers with their thirteen and a half millions of readers?

The country merchant will do well to study the wants of the people whose business he would have. He will do well to carry in stock the lines and brands of goods they demand—the named, widely-advertised lines. He will do equally as well to tell the people of what he has for them through carefully prepared advertisements in his local newspaper.

declare yourself—and you also, madame. There being other buildings better fitted, no soldiers will be quartered in this house."

The officer evidently mistook me for the owner of the house and not a prisoner. A blanket hid my hussar trousers and boots; he could only see my ragged shirt.

"And now, madame," he continued, "as monsieur appears to need the services of a physician, I shall send him a French doctor, brought in this morning from the Chateau of la Trappe."

He turned his grim, inflexible face to the Countess and bowed, then he bowed to me, swung squarely on his heel, and walked to the door.

"Admit the French doctor," he said to the soldier on guard, and marched out, his curved saber banging behind his spurred heels.

"It must be Dr. Delmont!" I said, looking at the Countess as there came a low knock at the door.

She rose unsteadily from her chair; somebody entered the room behind me and I turned, calling out, "Welcome, doctor!"

"Thank you," replied the calm voice of John Buckhurst at my elbow.

The Countess shrank aside as Buckhurst coolly passed before her, turned his slim back to the embers of the fire, and fixed his eyes on me—those pale, slow eyes, passionless as death.

"My friend," he observed in English, "do you think you will know me again when you have finished your scrutiny?"

The Countess, face averted, passed behind my chair.

"Wait," said Buckhurst; and turning directly to me, he added: "You were mistaken for a hussar at La Trappe; you were mistaken here for a hussar as long as the squad holding this house remained in Morsbronn. A few moments ago the provost mistook you for a civilian." He looked across at the Countess, who already stood with her hand on the door-knob.

"If you disturb me," he said, "I have only to tell the provost the truth. Members of Imperial Police caught without proper uniform inside German lines are shot, seance tenante."

The Countess stood perfectly still a moment, then came straight to me.

"Madame," said Buckhurst, in his peculiarly soft and persuasive voice, "I am not here to betray this gentleman; I am not here even to justify myself. I came here to make reparation, to ask your forgiveness, madame, for the wrong I have done you, and to deliver myself, if necessary, into the hands of the proper French authorities in expiation of my misguided zeal."

"I do not exactly understand," said I, "how you can expiate a crime here."

"I can at least make retribution," he said, turning the paper box over and over between his flat fingers.

"Have you brought me the diamonds which belong to the state?" I inquired, amused.

"Yes," he said, and to my astonishment he drew a small leather pouch from his pocket and laid it on my blanket-covered knees. "How many diamonds were there?" he asked.

"One hundred and three," I replied, incredulously, and opened the leather pouch. Inside was a bag of chamois-skin. This I stretched wide and emptied.

Scores of little balls of tissue-paper rolled out on the blanket over my knees; I opened one; it contained a diamond; I opened another, another, and another; diamonds lay blazing on my blanket, a whole handful, glittering in undimmed splendor.

"Count them," murmured Buckhurst, fashioning the paper box into a fly-trap with a lid.

With a quick movement I swept them into my hands, then one by one dropped the stones while I counted aloud one hundred and two diamonds. The one hundred and third jewel was, of course, safely in Paris.

When I had a second time finished the enumeration I leaned back in my chair, utterly at a loss to account for this man or for what he had done. As far as I could see there was no logic in it, nothing demonstrated, nothing proven. To me—and I am not either suspicious or obstinate by nature—Buckhurst was still an unrepentant thief and a dangerous one.

"Mr. Buckhurst," I said, pompously, "in bringing these diamonds to me you have certainly done all in your power to repair an injury which concerned all France.

"As I am situated, of course I cannot now ask you to accompany me to Paris, where doubtless the proper authorities would gladly admit extenuating circumstances, and credit you with a sincere repentance. But I put you on your honor to surrender at the first opportunity."

It was as stupidly trite a speech as I could think of.

Buckhurst glanced up at me. Was he taking my measure anew, judging me from my bray?

"I could easily aid you to leave Morsbronn," he said, stealthily.

"Oho," thought I, "so you're a German agent, too, as I suspected." But I said, aloud, simulating astonishment: "Do you mean to say, Mr. Buckhurst, that you would deliberately risk death to aid a police officer to bring you before a military tribunal in Paris?"

"I do not desire to pose as a hero or a martyr," he said, quietly, "but I regret what I have done, and I will do what an honest man can do to make the fullest reparation—even if it means my death."

The unhappy Countess looked at me. It goes hard with a woman when her guide and mentor falls.

"If you return to Paradise, in Morbihan, . . . as we had planned, may I go," he asked, humbly, "only as an obscure worker in the cause? I beg, madame, that you will not cast me off."

So he wanted to go to Morbihan—to the village of Paradise? Why?

The Countess said: "I welcome all who care for the cause. You will never hear an unkind word from me if you desire to resume the work in Paradise. Dr. Delmont will be there; Monsieur Tavernier also, I hope; and they are older and wiser than I, and they have reached that lofty serenity which is far above my troubled mind. Ask them what you have asked of me; they are equipped to answer you."

It was time for another discord from me, so I said: "Madame, you have seen a thousand men lay down their lives for France. Has it not shaken your allegiance to that ghost of patriotism which you call the 'Internationale'?"

The Countess turned her troubled eyes to me.

"What I have seen, what I have thought since yesterday has distressed me dreadfully," she said. "I have tried to include all the world in a broader pity, a broader, higher, and less selfish love than the jealous, single-minded love for one country—"

"You saw the cuirassiers die in the street below," I repeated, with the obstinacy of a limited intellect.

"Yes—and my heart went out to them," she replied, with an emphasis that pleased me and startled Buckhurst.

Buckhurst began to speak, but I cut him short.

"Then, madame, if your heart went out to the soldiers of France, it went out to France, too!"

"Yes—to France," she repeated, and I saw her lip begin to quiver.

"Wherein does love for France conflict with our creed, madame?" asked Buckhurst, gently. "It is only hate that we abjure."

She turned her gray eyes on him. "I will tell you: in that dreadful moment when the cavalry of France cheered Death in his own awful presence, I loved them and their country—my country!—as I had never loved in all my life. . . . And I hated, too! I hated the men who butchered them—more!—I hated the country where the men came from; I hated race and country and the blows they dealt, and the evil they wrought on France—my France! That is the truth; and I realise it!"

After a silence Buckhurst said: "All that may be, madame, yet not impair your creed."

"What!" she said, "does not hatred of the stranger impair my creed?"

"It will die out and give place to reason."

"When? When I attain the lofty, dispassionate level I have never attained. That will not be while this war endures."

"Who knows?" said Buckhurst, gently.

I said, abruptly: "So you are not going to denounce me to the Prussian provost?"

He lifted his well-shaped head and gazed at the Countess with an ad-

GUEST BROTHERS

THE QUALITY FEATURERS

DOES CONSCIENCE TROUBLE HIM

Some weeks ago the Hobart Republican published the following ode to Oklahoma: After carefully reading it we are caused to wonder if the editor of that paper is conscience stricken and takes this means of confessing it. That fellow must be something of a piker, and no one loves a piker, especially in Oklahoma. Here is his mournful tune:

To Oklahoma.

From Arbuckle's rugged mountains to Mexico's desert lands,
Where North Fork's gyppy fountains roll down her salty sands;
From many a dried up river, where thirsty cattle graze,
They call us to deliver ourselves of thy loudest praise.
But, oh, dear Oklahoma, we boast thy boundless fame,
But, oh, how many, many, lies are told in thy dear name!

Back East they think that Waterloo was fought on thy dear soil;
They think thy towns and country, too, all float in castor oil;
They think that Moses led the Jews right down the Chisholm Trail;
They think 'twas down on Otter Creek were Jonah swallowed the whale.

Thy drinking water's cool and sweet, thy rivers silvery clear.
Thy beefsteak always tender meat, thy gardens green throughout the year,
Thy summers cool and balmy, thy autums brown and sear,
Thy springtimes still and calmy—fine weather all the year,
Wheresoev'er I go beneath thy skies, thy glory's all the same,
And oh, what cheerful, lies are told in thy dear name!

Thy men of state are peerless, sent to us from on high—
They're honest, brave, and fearless, never graft or lie,
Thy institutions are equipped with men of widest fame,
The chief of all the countless lies that are told in thy dear name.

They say that Noah's ark was built over in the Choctaw Nation.
Ham settled and peopled Guthrie with succeeding generations,
St. Peter sent to Ardmore for hinges for his gate,
And 'tis said that some fool told that Balaam's mule was the first governor of the state.

Thy code of laws is a priceless gem to endure forever more
On thy crown 'twill be a diadem on the far and distant shore.
The Pentateuch, Psalms, and Proverbs were copied from thy constitution,
And thy text book commission started the French Revolution,
Thy fierce and bloody battles put Austerlitz to shame,
And adds one more to the myraid lies that are told in thy dear name.

One night a peddler and a crook, in an office way down town,
Got together and wrote a book, and sold it all around,
The State Board thought it wise, in all the schools the same
To teach that book, that coldest the lies that are told in thy dear name.

The teachers come to the institute with faces bright and clean.
Friend Foster tells about thy farms, wheat fields, and pastures green.
And what he has to tell is true, about thy fertile soil,
And all the things that it will do, for those who care to toil,
Homberger tells about thy winds, what cause them to blow,
And the things he tells about thee are very likely so,
But I because I need the tin—each day 'tis just the same—
Must spin, and spin, and spin these lies that are told in thy dear name.

NORMAL NOTES

Hu Bilz

And still they come! The classification room was crowded today with new ones, their hands full of class checks. With the enrollment increasing at the present rate, the 300 mark will be reached in a short time.

Mr. Glen Clarke, of the mathematics department was elected "Class Father" for the Junior class at the meeting of the class Saturday.

Frank Jones, the veteran foot ball player of the squad, leaves today for Kerr ville, Texas, where he has accepted a position as coach of the Kerrville High school team. Jones would have been the captain of the Normal team this year, had he remained. Both Harry and Frank are leaving this year. Harry goes to the University and with Frank leaving today this leaves only one of the "famous Jones" family in school. The school lost another valuable Jones last year. Pat Jones who graduated, was one of the biggest boosters East Central ever had.

Foot ball prospect sat East Central were never brighter. Coach Clarke has two squads working out daily with plenty of extra men in uniform waiting to get into the fray. Quite a few new men are working out with the squad and are making the old men hustle to keep up with them. Since Jones has left Roddie is being talked of for captain.

A noon hour debating club is being planned by some of the enthusiastic debaters and will probably be organized today. Last year East Central had a live club, the Forum, which met once a week. A similar club will be organized soon.

A call has been issued for all students who are interested in chorus work. Quite a number have reported and regular work will begin soon. Both boys and girls quartets and glee clubs will be organized. The orchestra and band are also under process of organization.

Mr. Fentem says that before long three Sunflower minstrels will again make their appearance with a complete change—new songs, new jokes, new scenery, new features—in fact every thing new.

Pres. Briles is in Western Oklahoma in the interest of the school.
